Barchart Launches New Real-Time Market Data Application: Barchart WebStation

CHICAGO, IL – March 4, 2008 – Barchart.com, Inc., a leading provider of market data and information, today announced the launch of a new real-time market data web-based application named Barchart WebStation. Barchart WebStation provides users with real-time quotes, charts, news and analysis. This major new product release offers futures, equity and foreign exchange market participants an advanced web-based platform and a full-featured market data front-end. Barchart WebStation is also designed for third-parties to white-label the product, as well as integrate proprietary content and features into the product, such as research and electronic trading.

Barchart WebStation was built with an advanced Java-based technology structure which provides for maximum speed and stability. Core features of Barchart WebStation include multiple workspaces, customizable quote boards, pre-built workspace templates, advanced charts, time and sales, spread matrix windows, data download, alerts, mobile plug-in, technical data, fundamental data, Dow Jones News, CRB News and weather. And, as a web-based platform Barchart WebStation provides ease of access from anywhere via the internet.

“The launch of Barchart WebStation provides traders, brokers and market participants with the latest in web-based market data technology and a platform that provides flexibility to third-parties to white-label the product and integrate their own content and capabilities,” said Eero Pikat, President of Barchart.

A key feature of Barchart WebStation is the capability to white-label the product for third-parties. The product can be fully branded by a third-party, as well as used by a third-party to incorporate their own content and technology into the system. Third-parties can feed their own research, news and related information into Barchart WebStation, as well as integrate electronic trading functionality into the product. Additionally, components of the product, like advanced charting can be integrated into other third-party front-ends or software.

Barchart WebStation is available for a free 14-day trial and for $79 per month thereafter, plus any exchange fees. For more information or to register, please visit www.barchart.com/webstation or call (800) 238-5814.
